ACTIVITY 15: TENNIS BALL CHALLENGES

1. Tennis ball challenge
   Get into a press-up position, arms straight, tennis ball in one of your hands. Throw the ball up, let it bounce once and catch it with your other hand whilst remaining balanced and in your press up position. Test your core stability and see how many you can do consecutively.

2. Tennis Ball challenge with a partner or parent
   In a press up position do the same as above but face another person 1/2 metres away and try to have the highest rally you can throwing and catching the ball together after one bounce.

3. Wall Challenge
   For this challenge you need a racket, ball colour of your choice and a wall. Stand around 2 meters away from the wall in a good ‘Ready’ position, using a chopper grip feed the ball against the wall and challenge yourself to have the highest volleying rally you can.

4. Wall Challenge 2
   Do the same as above but stretch yourself further and to start with you are only allowed to do forehand volley’s, then only backhand volleys. Finally, to make it even tougher you have to alternate from forehand to backhand.

5. Extra Challenges
   Tennis is a sport that needs high levels of co-ordination. Making sure we do exercises using our non-playing hand is essential to improving our hand eye co-ordination, improves our backhands and helps turn athletes in to tennis players. With any of the challenges above try to do them all using your non-playing hand. Also, again using just a racket, ball and wall, try to have the highest rally you can using the non-playing hand.
